

Hokkus-Focused Scholarly Hybrid Haiku

Brandon G. Sibbaluca¹, Rico Gabriel A. Ramos²

Research and Development Office, Emilio Aguinaldo College Cavite brandon.sibbaluca@eac.edu.ph¹, ricogabriel.ramos@eac.edu.ph²

This original work has a similar sound but opposite meaning to the word "hocus-pocus." Instead of tricking an audience to deceive, hide truth, or distract people, a hybrid haiku that focused on "hokku" is utilized to express the importance of scholarly works. A combination of traditional and modern haiku will be applied for flexible hokku in a longer context of research and creative works.

Scholarly Work Spirit

*Col three twenty-three,
Two Timothy Two Fifteen,
Proverbs Two-Cube Nine*

If the holy spirit guides God-followers into truth to glorify their lord, then the scholarly work spirit guides learned people into ethical and evidence-based knowledge to sustain the Earth of the almighty creator. This analogy encourages learned individuals to prioritize sustainable development objectives with a heart, focusing on the common good of the people in this world. Learned people have the biggest responsibilities in this world and know that it will not be a waste, so just focus on giving their best for the truth and contributing to generations' lives. A man who is very good at his work will stand before respectable, powerful beings and, above all, beyond this life. Do it with justice and integrity, and a reward is waiting for people like you who do not judge and are just focusing on themselves to help other people.

Spirit of Research

*Proverbs two-five two,
Thessalonians five two-one,
Psalm one-one-one two*

Without spirit, mind and heart seem empty. Mysteries in this world are designedly created with a purpose, and learned people are the ones who must discover the wisdom to sustain the biggest gift of life. However, everything must be researched meticulously and applied with good innovation based on evidence, which underwent ethical procedures. Inasmuch as the seven deadly sins exist, ten commandments must prevail by knowing oneself, one's purpose in life, and always being biased to choose good things. Despite what is happening in our country, a true leader with its government must function based on God's will and not the other way around. A country's prosperity index is based on its identity.

Researcher's Identity

Community-based, ethical, evidence-led creative works.